

BUS 308 : Human Resource Management

This course is a comprehensive review of the core functions relating to the effective management of an organization's human resources recruitment and selection, performance appraisal, compensation, administration, and strategic human resource planning. Special attention is given to contemporary topics including equal employment opportunity, career development, separation and downsizing, and international human resource issues. The emphasis will be on understanding and applying these concepts to help students in the wide-range of positions and organizations in which students find themselves.

Credits 3

Prerequisites

BUS 205